

Samantha DeVito

Associate

Samantha DeVito brings energy and enthusiasm that is hard to match. Samantha's primary responsibility is to act as a conduit between clients and Congress. She is often found writing memorandums of Congressional briefings and hearings for clients, organizing and planning meetings between clients with Congressional staffs, and reaching out to legislators to support and promote client objectives thereby ensuring client voices are being heard throughout Capitol Hill. Samantha has also quickly become a reliable source for conducting research for the firm's clients. Samantha has discovered a special interest in working within the healthcare and labor policy sectors.

Samantha began her career in Washington as an intern in the House of Representatives for Congressman Joe Courtney (D-CT). Her work experience also includes volunteer work in Kolkata, India. Samantha spent 12 weeks immersed in Indian culture teaching English and Health-Hygiene to elementary school students while also providing individual and small group tutoring to students of varying ages in an impoverished region within the city. Also, while pursuing her Bachelor's degree, Samantha gained valuable work experience that includes four years of administrative support within the Duke University Police Department and serving as a Teaching Assistant within the Duke University Sanford School of Public Policy.

Samantha is a recent graduate of Duke University earning a Bachelor of Arts degree, cum laude, with a dual major in Public Policy and Global Health. A native of Preston, CT, Samantha enjoys rooting for the Duke Blue Devils basketball team and each summer looks forward to continuing her aspiration to visit at least one different Major League Baseball park (when Congress is not in session of course).
