

POLICY • ADVOCACY • STRATEGY

Alice Alexeeva is an avid researcher and government relations professional who keeps clients ahead of evolving legislative and regulatory developments across AI, intellectual property, trade, tax, media, and agriculture landscapes. She monitors congressional hearings, agency actions, and policy forums and turns complex issues into clear, timely briefings for clients. Alice supports advocacy on creator rights and technology policy by coordinating stakeholder outreach and drafting Hill-facing communications. As a DC-area native, Alice has spent her life forging strong connections with passionate advocates and organizers that drive positive change to address equity and justice. She is a jack-of-all-trades working to create a fair and inclusive society for all.

Alice started with NVG as a Fellow in the fall of 2023. Prior to NVG, she volunteered and worked on DC Attorney General and Council campaigns that were centered on government accountability. She also tutored DCPS students through a grant-funded afterschool program to increase children's reading and math literacy in the District. Alice comes from a strong agricultural background having spent two years managing a 50-acre equine farm in Virginia where she built an extensive network of land conservation leaders, generational farmers, and equine-sport enthusiasts.

During her time at the University of Wisconsin–Madison, Alice led its nationally recognized student radio station, WSUM. As WSUM's representative to the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents, she secured funding to expand programming and helped establish the station as a campus institution rather than a typical student organization. She also worked at the UW Law School's Center for Patient Partnerships, connecting patients with needed social and legal services and evaluating those resources for systemic improvement. To better advocate for early-childhood education policy, she spent time supporting preschool classrooms and teachers.

Alice is a proud first-generation American who grew up in the DC metro area. She graduated from the University of Wisconsin–Madison's School of Human Ecology with a B.S. in Human Development & Family Studies, focusing on public policy. She lives in Washington, DC, with her bull terrier, Eggbert, and can often be found gardening while listening to jazz and soul.
