Alice Alexeeva, an avid researcher, specializes in keeping clients informed of current legislative developments and industry trends in the AI, climate, labor, and media spaces. She attends Congressional committee hearings, policy briefings, and academic panels on behalf of clients and drafts concise memos of relevant updates for them. Alice also helps coordinate communication strategies to effectively promote briefings on the Hill. As a DC-area native, Alice has spent her life forging strong connections with passionate advocates and organizers that drive positive change to address equity and justice. She is a jack-of-all-trades working to create a fair and inclusive society for all.

Alice started with NVG as a Fellow in the fall of 2023. Prior to NVG, she volunteered and worked on DC Attorney General and Council campaigns. She also tutored DCPS students through a grant-funded afterschool program to increase children's reading and math literacy in the District. Alice comes from a strong agricultural background having spent two years managing a 50-acre equine farm in Virginia where she built an extensive network of land conservation leaders, generational farmers, and equine-sport enthusiasts.

During her time at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Alice led its nationally recognized student radio station, WSUM. As WSUM's representative to the University of Wisconsin's Board of Regents, she secured funding to expand WSUM's programming and legitimized the radio station as more than just a regular student organization. Additionally, Alice worked at the UW-Madison Law School's Center for Patient Partnerships where she assisted patients in identifying needed social & legal services and connected them to resources; then evaluating those resources and strategizing how to improve them. Alice also helped teach in preschool classrooms to better advocate for early-childhood education reform on the state level.

Alice is a proud first-generation American who grew up in the DC metro area. She graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Madison's School of Human Ecology in May 2020 with a BS in Human Development & Family Studies, focusing on public policy. Alice lives in Washington DC with her bull terrier, Eggbert, and can often be found gardening while listening to jazz and soul music.
